It’s been a busy year for all of us in the Anthropology Department. We currently have 65 majors in Anthropology and 56 in Archaeological Studies. We’re pleased that our minor programs continue to grow with 21 students in Anthropology, 6 in Archaeological Studies, 14 in Biological Anthropology, 7 in Medical Anthropology and 27 in Museum Studies. And overall, this past year, we taught more than 1500 students at SUNY Potsdam in 55 different classes!

In addition to teaching, faculty members have also been active in scholarly pursuits and community outreach. It would be difficult to list all of our accomplishments here, but some highlights include:

• Dr Perkins curated the Gibson Gallery exhibit Painting on Location: The Art of Lin Haizhong that included an opening reception with the artist and several delegates from the Chinese government, a tea ceremony and traditional music performances. In addition, he was elected to serve on the Executive Board for the American Anthropological Association’s Council on Museum Anthropology.

• Dr Johnson-Weiner served as consultant to the PBS American Experience episode The Amish that premiered in February. She is currently the guest curator for a special exhibit on “The Amish: Our North Country Neighbors” which opened in the Traditional Arts of Upstate New York (TAUNY) gallery in June.
We said goodbye this past year to Dr Carolyn Schwarz, who moved with her family to Maryland. We will miss her greatly. But we welcome two new faculty members to our department: Tim Messner (PhD, Temple University, 2008) joins us as a prehistoric archeologist to “fill” Dr Pykles’ shoes and Jennifer Campbell (PhD, University of Toronto, 2011) replaces Dr Schwarz to teach cultural anthropology. Additionally, I would like to congratulate Dr Kruczek-Aaron who was awarded continuing appointment (aka “tenure”) and promotion to Associate Professor this past Spring.

We’ve been doing some renovation in MacVicar Hall this past year. Phyllis Charleson worked with the Custodial Staff to renovate the entrance foyer into MacVicar from the quad. It’s now a great space for students to relax and study. And last summer, Karen O’Brien and the staff at the Physical Plant upgraded all the furniture in the Archaeology Lab, the Bioarchaeology Lab, and the Museum Studies workroom, all in MacVicar Hall. This summer, Karen is working with us to replace the furniture in the Anthropology Conference Room in MacVicar.

I could go on. But rather than that, I would encourage you all to get in touch with us – either in person or by phone or email. We would enjoy chatting with you to tell you more about what’s going on here and we would love to find out what’s new in your life. Until then, best wishes from all of us in the Department of Anthropology!

Alan L Hersker, PhD
Associate Professor / Chair
Jennifer L. Campbell completed her Bachelors and Masters degrees in Anthropology at Memorial University of Newfoundland and Labrador. She earned her PhD in July of 2011 from the Anthropology Department at the University of Toronto. She has taught four-field anthropology courses at Lakehead University, Trent University, The University of Toronto, and Sheridan College. She is a full member of the Archaeology Centre at the University of Toronto where she served as the assistant to the director for several years. She is also a member of Trent University's Archaeology Research Centre. She is the co-director (with Dr. Heather M-L Miller of the University of Toronto) of the Caravanserai Networks Project. Jennifer’s ongoing research examines how and why people occupy specific places through time, why we anchor ourselves and our sense of history to these places, and how “we” present these places as heritage sites and thus shape the direction of historical engagement. Her work explores the roles of social media, digital media, and emergent communication and recording technologies in forming interpretations of the past. These research directives incorporate a four-field approach with a focus on the Anthropology of Archaeology. She has conducted field research in the Canadian subarctic, southern Ontario, eastern Canada, and most recently with her ongoing project in northern South Asia.

Tim Messner was born and raised in northeastern Pennsylvania in a tiny town outside Scranton, not far from Schrute Farms. While working in Yellowstone National Park one summer (flipping burgers and scooping ice cream) he became fascinated by ancient people’s ability to thrive in their environment – that did it for him, he was hooked. In 2008, he received a PhD in Anthropology from Temple University. His dissertation examined ancient human/environmental interactions in eastern North America, a topic for which he was awarded the 2009 Society for American Archaeology Dissertation of the Year Award. Over the last several years he has been teaching at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point. He also has the honor of holding a Research Associate status at the Smithsonian Institute’s Department of Anthropology and the Center for American Archaeology. His research specializes in the archaeology of northeastern North America with an emphasis on the interconnections between people and ecosystems on local, regional and global scales. He utilizes archaeological, paleoethnobotanical, ethnohistoric and geological modes of inquiry to reconstruct aspects of prehistoric people’s relationships with their environments and how they have transformed particular environmental contexts. He is especially attentive to: 1) the emergence, intensification and environmental impact of prehistoric land use / management strategies; 2) the relationship between climate change and sociocultural-technological shifts; 3) the techniques and technologies utilized by prehistoric peoples to ensure, procure and process sustenance from their environments; and 4) the theories and methods utilized in detecting and understanding plant and animal domestication.

Kilmer Undergraduate Research Award

Congratulations to Grace Boyd Pollack, Kara Chapin, Joseph Friedel, Andrea Hill, Matthew Phillips, Stephanie Ciotti and Andrea Wendell, each of whom received a Kilmer Undergraduate Research Award in the 2011-2012 academic year.

Collegiate Anthropologist

Editors and students authors alike, have been busy publishing the Fall edition of the Collegiate Anthropologist. Click on the link to view the current and prior editions of the Collegiate Anthropologist and our prior newsletters at http://www.potsdam.edu/academics/AAS/Anthro/news.cfm. They are currently preparing articles for the next edition for Spring 2013.

Presidential Scholars

We have three new Presidential Scholars in the department: Justin Benedict (Anthropology/Math), Amy Hudson (Archaeology/Geology), and Jared Muehlbauer (Archaeology/Anthropology).

There were 12 students accepted total, so our students certainly did well in this campus-wide competition.
Anthropology Club
Events and Activities

Other Major Events This Year:
❖ Prepared a “Culture Shock” Dinner with Culinary Club of various cultural dishes
❖ Participated in an Ancient Games Day with Gaming Club
❖ Presented the annual Field School Social with Dr. Kruczek-Aaron
❖ Hosted a talk on Egyptian archaeology from our Professor Scardera

In the Spring semester, the Club went to visit the Drouler’s Archaeological Site in Saint-Anicet, Quebec. This was a reconstructed site of Iroquois longhouses.

Also this year, students went to the AAA’s which was held in Montreal, QC. The theme was Traces, Tidemarks and Legacies and we learned a lot from the different presentations.
This year, a total of 19 students from the Anthropology Club ventured to Bridgewater State University for the annual NEAA conference. Six students presented original undergraduate research at the conference. Presentations included a paper panel from Dr. Hersker’s applied class with research on the elderly living in the North Country. A poster was presented on molar surface area and cusp area on tooth populations of modern humans. The other students attending were not just sitting passively in the audience, they were busy networking with faculty and making connections with the Anthropology and Archaeology Clubs at BSU.

This coming fall we have several events to look forward to including a Kickball game between various academic clubs on campus and a Family Feud Tournament with History Association. We are also hoping to visit the Point a Callierre, Montreal Museum of Archaeology and History. And we’re all looking forward to our annual department BBQ for faculty and students planned for September.

Being such an active club, we are always looking for places to go, events to attend and people to meet. Stay tuned for future news about the Anthropology Club!

Stephen Russell is the Vice President of Disabilities Service for Liberty Resources Inc. in Syracuse, N.Y. He oversees the Disabilities Service Coordination for this company, which is a non-profit human service agency. In 2004 he received his Masters of Arts in Public Administration from the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University. He resides in Fayetteville, N.Y. with his wife Nicole and their three children Evelyn(5), Charles(3) and Benjamin(6 months).

Kelly Redder continues in the position as Assistant Vice President for Alumni Relations at RIT-just hit the 11-year mark. Also continues to enjoy international travel, living on the lake, eating, gardening, painting….and yes, grandchildren! Most recent trip was to Egypt to fulfill lifelong dream of visiting the pyramids at Giza; got it in just under the wire, before the political and social unrest. The prior year fulfilled another lifelong dream of seeing the X’ian terracotta soldiers in China. I’ve been incredibly blessed!

Bill Bauerband (‘81) currently a Senior Living Counselor at Newcastle Place & Estates, the premier CCRC retirement community in the Milwaukee area located in the northern suburb of Mequon Wisconsin. All of his work since graduation has been in sales. For the past 10 years he has worked in the Senior Living industry. Bill currently resides in the nearby town of Cedarburg. It is an idyllic small town with many of it’s original limestone and cream city brick buildings from the mid an late 1800’s on the historic register. It has a small quintessential downtown. He has been very happily married to the well known fantasy writer Mary Rickert for the past 12 years.

Mark W. Ewing (‘84) I worked as a contract archaeologist for the Rochester Museum & Science Center from 1986-2012 (last 8+ years as Manager), and recently started my own company with my wife Lisa. The new company is Archaeological Consulting Experts and we are based out of Mount Morris, NY. Business Contact: 585-447-7082 or mark.ewing62@gmail.com.

Lucienne Diver– I wish I could say that I’m currently using my anthropology major. However, I’ve gone into publishing. I’ve been a literary agent for nineteen years now, representing primarily fantasy, science fiction, mystery/suspense, romance and young adult fiction, including the bestselling Morganville Vampires series by Rachel Caine. I’m also a published author with the Vamped series of young adult novels out from Flux Books and the Latter-Day Olympians series just started with Samhain (Book #1: BAD BLOOD). The latter does involve mythology, particularly Greek, so…If any of that would be interesting, I’d be pleased to send info.

Kristina Traudt-Although my long term plans are still to attend grad school for archaeology, I decided to take a year or two off to save up some money and gain experience in the professional field. A couple weeks ago I moved into an apartment with my sister in Auburn, NY and a few days later landed a job as program associate for a local nonprofit called the Harriet Tubman Center for Justice and Peace. My job consists of grant writing (thank you Dr. K-A and Dr. Herskerl!) and program organizing for Auburn's Community Wide Dialogue to End Racism.

Audrie MacDuff-2011- I am currently working on an LGBT grant through the NYS Department of Health, which is equally balanced with my work as a sexual health educator at Planned Parenthood. I am also the Jump-Start Adult Coordinator for GLSEN (Gay Lesbian Straight Education Network) New York Capital Region. In my spare time, I am volunteering for HeadCount, which is a non partisan/grassroots organization that registers voters at concerts and music festivals.

Alex French-Was accepted at Clarkson University
Cheryl Benn - I attended the graduate program in physical anthropology at the University of Tennessee (Knoxville) but decided on a change of directions. She went back to New York to attend law school, passed the bar in 1979 and practiced law until joining the Peace Corps. In 1987 I moved to Virginia, took the bar here and, in 2005, established my own practice, which is where I have been since then. I still have a keen interest in all things anthropological and follow recent developments as I come across them (I even have a client who is a practicing archaeologist!). I went to a class reunion late in the 1990’s, from Japan, where I was living at the time. It was a lot of fun; it was the only time I’ve been back. The trees got a lot taller but the smell of the brick was just the same!

Mary Beth Collier (’81) I am currently the Dean of Academic Advising at SUNY New Paltz

Murat O’Hara (’99) Currently I own a Bicycle shop in Watertown New York, Blue Cat Cycles, and we just celebrated 10 years of business. Also, since graduation I have been working with two Archaeological firms doing cultural resource management all over New York. This summer I will be in Plattsburgh, NY acting as an assistant at Pikes Cantonment, a field school hosted by Clinton Community College lead by Professor Tim Abel.

Jonathan Reeves is headed to Olduvai Gorge for six weeks then finishing up his masters degree at UCL in September.

Dr. Elizabeth Moore (’84) is the Curator of Archaeology at the Virginia Museum of Natural History (www.vmnh.net). She is currently leading a multi-year zooarchaeological research project focusing on Native Americans in the upper Potomac Valley during the Late Woodland and Contact periods. She also works for URS Corporation conducting zooarchaeological analysis of assemblages from sites throughout the east coast and from a wide range of time periods. Dr. Moore partners with the Piedmont Governor's School for Math, Science and Technology to teach advanced high school science students archaeological research methods with hands-on projects including site excavation, zooarchaeological and archaeobotanical analysis, and cemetery documentation and interpretation. She serves on the boards of several professional and civic organizations and donates her time to write grant proposals for local non-profit organizations. Her daughter Rebecca graduated this year from Martinsville High School and will be attending Salem College in the fall.

Megan Donnelly Dundas - I graduated from Western University of Health Sciences Veterinary School on May 18th of this year and am now a practicing small animal veterinarian in Rhinebeck, NY. A big departure from Anthropology, but I'll always be an anthropologist at heart.

Cara Tromans-2007 - I am a Program Analyst at Conservation Services Group in Albany, NY.
Neal Tepper ('82) After retiring from the Department of Human Services of the State of North Dakota where I was the Supervisor of Family Preservation Services I returned to work on the Standing Rock Sioux Indian Reservation in North & South Dakota as School Counseling Director in Fort Yates North Dakota. A highlight of my career for the State was that I was selected to head up a mental health team in Louisiana for 3 months following Hurricane Katrina. I credit my education at Potsdam for giving me the education that has led me to a very successful and happy life.....Neal Tepper, PO Box 73, Fort Yates, North Dakota 58538.

Allison S. Wheeler ('71) I retired from the St. Lawrence-Lewis BOCES last July. I served 39 years in successive positions of school librarian (Knox Memorial, Edwards Central, Edwards-Knox Central, Ogdensburg City Schools), Coordinator of Library Services (BOCES), Supervisor of Library Services (BOCES) and school Library System Director/Supervisor of Learning Resources (BOCES). My background in Anthropology/Sociology at Potsdam stood me in good stead over the years, as librarians are generalists and researchers. I was able to use the vocabulary and concepts learned in Anthro/Sociology to the benefit of library clients (students, teachers, and administrators). As I now work on sorting out the contents of our house in preparation for moving downstate (after living in Old Dekalb for 15 years and Canton for 24 years), I’m experiencing a different sort of “archaeological dig” than what I studied at Potsdam—but one that’s nearly as fascinating!

Rebecca Jacobs – I’m still in Quetzaltenango, Guatemala working on my Ph.D. Fieldwork. I just got a grant from the University of Connecticut Human Rights Institute to extend my stay and work on a side project, focusing on how national-level women’s rights legislation has been “taken up” at the local level by indigenous women.

Robert Sanford-I continue to teach at the University of Southern Maine (title, etc below) and recently became chair of the department of Environmental Science. In summers I get to play archaeologist. I have worked on Malaga Island in Casco Bay, Maine, which was the site of a 19th and early 20th century mixed ethnic group. In 1912, the governor booted everyone off the island and had the century removed--perhaps influenced by the eugenics movement, and primarily by a desire to prepare the area for a potentially booming tourist industry. In 2011, Maine finally issued a formal apology. Malaga's story is currently a featured Maine State Museum exhibit (May 2012-May 2013). [Link to exhibit]

My co-authored books on archaeology (Cultural Resources Archaeology, and Practicing Archaeology) recently were issued in second editions. [Link to book]

And it all started when I took an archaeology field school with Dr. Steven Marqusee in the summer of 1980.

My wife, Robin Sanford (BA in Economics Minor in Anthropology, ‘82) since 1978 is a cataloguing librarian at the University of New England, in Portland Maine. Our children are 26, 24, and 17.

CORPORATE MATCHING GIFTS

Your company may double or triple your personal contribution to SUNY Potsdam. In most cases, if your spouse works for a matching gift company, they too, will often match your gift to the college. In order for the college to benefit from a corporate matching gift program, you must fill out a Matching Gift Form (obtained from your company’s personnel office) and send it with this form and your contribution to the Potsdam College Foundation. If you’re not sure whether your company matches gifts to higher education, please check with your personnel office or call us (315-267-3050).

Secure online giving form: HTTPS://SECURE.POTS DAM.EDU/GIVING
Please choose “Support a Specific Program” and then enter “Anthropology” under “Other”

Please send this form along with your gift to:
