Does the Way Teacher Educators Teach Become Part of the Curriculum?

Abstract: During my time working on curriculum revision in South Africa, I have become ever more aware of the impact of the pedagogical choices teacher educators make. These choices relate to the curriculum, the developmental stages of our students, and the context in schools. This session will share my current research looking at the impact of the pedagogical choices I make and how the outcomes are impacted by different contexts.