Bachelor of Music with an emphasis in Music Business

The Music Business major is designed for students who want to earn a place in the music business industry. We provide the preparation for employment in Arts Administration, Music Products, and the Recording Industry. Our faculty are true experts in audio technology, music retail, music production, entertainment law, and music product development.

Besides studio lessons, ensembles, and the Basic Musicianship courses required of all music majors, students in the Music Business degree take courses in economics, accounting, management, marketing, and music business courses such as Music Business I & II, Legal Aspects of the Music Industry, and the Practicum in Music Business.

Many students may also choose to add a concentration, a minor, or even a second major to their degree program.

Music Business majors also take electives in music business or related topics, including Arts Administration, Music Merchandising, Grant Writing, Recording & Production Techniques, and Promotion & Marketing.
NAMM Show
Since 2006, music business students at Crane have participated in The National Association of Music Merchants (NAMM) Show held each January in Anaheim, California. The students work as interns for industry sponsors gaining valuable experience working in the industry's biggest trade show and forming important industry relationships. Crane is the only college program in the country that affords their students this opportunity.

Minor in Business of Music
The Business of Music minor is designed as a flexible course of study which will lead participants into career interest areas in the music business, including arts administration, recording industry, music publishing, music criticism, copyright law, broadcast industry, union and guilds, and music merchandising. This program enables students to seek entry level positions in the areas of study, as well as to pursue advanced study in such areas as arts administration and music merchandising. The minor is open to all qualified SUNY Potsdam students.
