Experiential Learning through Digital Literacy

Abstract: We are a multi-disciplinary, cross-functional team from faculty, the library, and applied learning who are collaborating on a Loughheed Applied Learning grant-funded project about digital literacy. We will share the findings of ongoing active research based on activities that engage learners in applied learning and digital media literacy development in undergraduate and graduate courses, as well as in library and student support services. Digital literacy is a crucial competency in 21st century learning and workplace environments and applied learning experiences prepare students to navigate complex, real-world settings.
