Wednesday, February 26th, 2020, noon
Literacy Center Balcony

Mei Shen
Department of Advanced Studies in Education

Self-Regulation Strategy Development (SRSD): An Evidence-Based Program for Teaching Struggling Students to Write

Abstract. Self-Regulated Strategy Development (SRSD) is an instructional program designed to help children develop knowledge about writing, writing strategies, writing self-regulation and self-monitoring skills, as well as positive attitudes toward writing. The purpose of the SRSD model is to help children become independent, sufficient, and goal-oriented writers. This seminar will provide a detailed overview of the SRSD program in terms of instructional components, procedures, and effectiveness on significantly improving struggling students’ overall writing performance.